

University of Pavia
Ethics and International Relations

Lectures and seminars given by Prof. Darrel Moellendorf

Attendance at the lectures is open to all students.

Active participation in the seminars is conditional upon having studied the relevant “required readings”. Students who have not done the relevant readings may attend seminars as an “observer” (i.e. without contributing to the discussion).

Students enrolled in the course in Ethics and International Relations are expected to attend all the lectures and to participate actively in at least one seminar on each of the three lecture topics (see course syllabus for details). All seminar readings can be accessed through KIRO (see LM in World Politics and International Relations, course in Ethics and International Relations).

Lectures:

Monday 16 October, 9.00-11.00, Aula 5
Global Distributive Justice

Thursday 19 October, 14.00-16.00, Aula 4
Climate Change and Justice

Monday 23 October, 9.00-11.00, Aula 5
Immigration and Justice

Seminars:

Tuesday 17 October, 9.00-11.00, Aula 5
Global Distributive Justice: The Statist View

Required reading: Michael Blake, “Distributive Justice, State Coercion, and Autonomy, Philosophy and Public Affairs, 2001.

Optional reading: Andrea Sangiovanni, “Global Justice, Reciprocity, and the State”, Philosophy and Public Affairs, 2007.

Wednesday 18 October, 9.00-11.00, CASIP
Global Distributive Justice: The Egalitarian View

Required reading: Darrel Moellendorf, “Global Distributive Justice: The Cosmopolitan View,” in David Held and Pietro Maffettone eds. Global Political Theory (London: Polity Press, 2016).

Optional reading: Simon Caney, “Humanity, Associations, and Global Justice: in Defence of Humanity-Centered Cosmopolitan Egalitarianism”, The Monist, 2011.

Tuesday 24 October, 9.00-11.00, Aula 5
Intergenerational Justice and Climate Change

Required reading: Darrel Moellendorf and Axel Schaffer, “Equalizing the Costs of Climate Change: An Alternative to discounted Utilitarianism”, Midwest Studies in Philosophy, 2016,

Optional reading: Nicholas Stern, “Ethics, Equity, and the Economics of Climate Change”, paper 2, Economics and Philosophy, 2014.

Tuesday 24 October, 11.00-13.00, Aula 5
International Justice and Climate Change

Required reading: Darrel Moellendorf, “A Right to Sustainable Development”, The Monist, 2011.

Optional reading: Simon Caney, “Just Emissions”, Philosophy and Public Affairs, 40 (2012).

Wednesday 25 October, 9.00-11.00, CASIP
Immigration and Justice: The Case for Closed Borders

Required reading: David Miller, “Closed Borders” chapter 4 of D. Miller, Strangers in Our Midst (Harvard University Press, 2016).

Optional reading: David Miller, “Refugees” chapter 5 of Strangers in Our Midst (Harvard University Press, 2016).

Thursday 26 October, 9.00-11.00, CASIP
Immigration and Justice: The Case for Open Borders

Required reading: Joseph Carens, “The Case for Open Borders”, in J. Carens, The Ethics of Immigration (Oxford University Press, 2013).

Optional reading: Joseph Carens, “Refugees”, in J. Carens, The Ethics of Immigration (Oxford University Press, 2013).